"Little Butterflies"

Two bright stars were snatched from our galaxy today. Like a thief in the night someone came and stolen them away, now our world's will never be the same and there is no one to blame.

Two little butterflies went out to play and got carried away. They were out playing and having fun, just enjoying the early November sun when the time had come for them to fly away. Leaving all of us not knowing what to say. They were so full of spirit and life that they never let anything get in their way. Even though they were so small they had no problems saying F you all. They lived life to its fullest acting like they didn't have a care in the world. They grew up together, laughing together, crying together, playing together, and flying away together friends to the end for sure.

Two bright star's stolen from my galaxy today now my world will never be the same it's a shame as I watch the two little butterflies fly away our world's will never be the same.

Tell me oh dear God how are we supposed to live with this pain?

Will it drive us insane? Even if there was someone to blame what would it gain! It would never take away our pain. it's such a shame that two beautiful bright stars were stolen from our galaxy today. Our world's will never be the same. What more can I say as I watch the two little butterflies fly away....
