“ So sorry to read about the lose of your son. Death is an enemy whenever it strikes but so very young yet is even more difficult to deal with. The words found at Rev 21:3,4 are a comfort at a time like this as it offers hope for those we have lost in death. My hope is that these words are a comfort to you as well now and in the months ahead. And please except my sincere sympathy at this time of your great lose.

“ Donny was the one who gave me the name Nina cause I am his godmother and couldn't say Perenia (italian way to say godmother) so this was so special to me especially when he would still call me Nina all these years. RIP dear godson you will truly missed

“Don and I had a friendship on a level you just don't see every day. We were both "transplants"... families from Southern Michigan who moved north to a rural area. Both highly intelligent, and both with a sense of being outside the mainstream. We bonded on a deep, deep level.

Many of our first experiences of life's ups and downs were shared. As smart as we were, (and thought ourselves to be) we had an unerring ability to get ourselves into trouble. It was almost a given on any excursion, despite every precaution and assurance that "This time will be different!"

All through our youth, and well into adulthood, we stood together. When plans went south, we comiserated. When things went well, we celebrated. When we suffered, we shared our pain.

Life has a way of throwing you for loops, and Don found himself in one he could not escape from. Our connection remained, but our communication faltered. His behaviors changed, and not even a tight bond can sway a man from a path he refuses to stray from. Don took a road which I could not follow, no matter how much I loved and cared for him. It reached its end, and now my brother is gone. The hole left by his passing is immense. He was so much more than anyone knew, and his potential was limitless.

My deepest sympathy and heartfelt condolences to out to his family. (My second family) Know you are all in my thoughts, and know you are loved.
