“ hey pappy i love you and miss you everyday of my life i miss us talking about life and joking around and being funny and coming to visit you and grandma every now and then i talk to you and when i go to grandmas house i sit down with your ashes and i talk in my head to you, you grandma were so funny and joking around and i remember when grandma was making dinner you would say im resting my eyes then you would fall asleep and when a commercial was on would fall asleep and i loved talking to you on the spirit box. every where you would go you always had a smile on your face then when you got home you would always say honey im home and i would run out of the room and give you a hug i love those hugs and then i was going to bed you would always say (the claw is coming for you) then when grandma needed help taking her socks off you would always joke around and make me laugh and then when someone said something you would say i have no opinion you would always make me laugh and i never thought that you would pass away bc i was so close to you and then when you got worse i stayed home that day bc i had a feeling something was going to happen and when i stood up off the bed mom called nana and i knew you passed away and i hit the ground and i was balling my eyes out, but i know that your not in anymore pain or suffering but i will never forget you i will always love and miss you forever and always i love you pappy.
